

INTERNATIONAL WEBINAR SERIES

The effective use of labour market information (LMI) in career development practice

4 April 2019

8.00pm AEDST

Presenter

Professor
Jenny Bimrose

Labour market information (LMI) is pivotal to effective career development practice.

However, it is often challenging for career professionals to keep themselves up-to-date with high quality and robust LMI, to access these data from reliable sources and then mediate them effectively with a range of clients.

This webinar will address these challenges, with an emphasis on the practical integration and application of LMI in practice.

It will link to the core competency specified in section 2 of the Professional Standards for Australian Career Development Practitioners: the integral role of LMI in career development practice.

The overall aim is to support the effective use of labour market information (LMI) in career development practice.

The objectives are: to increase understanding of the role of LMI in career practice; to identify challenges in the use of LMI as part of career support; to consider the skills and strategies needed to maximise the impact of LMI, and to reflect on the relationship between theory underpinning effective practice and LMI.

Jenny is Emeritus Professor at the Institute for Employment Research, University of Warwick.

Click here to register for this event.